SACRAMENTAL LITURGIES: BAPTISM

The clothing of the baby with the white garments takes place after the baptism and anointing with Chrism. The white garments now placed on the child after he or she has been baptized is a wonderful sign to the community that they have been purified and are now members of the Christian assembly. This dressing that occurs after the baptism, not when they arrive in church, reflects the action of the early church when catechumens were led out in their old garments and re-entered the church with their long white gowns that signified to all present, that they had been baptized. The white alb that the priest and deacon were are a form of this baptismal vesture. This action mirrors the words of St., Paul who reminds us that in Baptism we put on Christ.
